

Mr. Martin Eran-Tasker

Technical Director

Association of Asia Pacific Airlines (AAPA)

Martin Eran-Tasker has held the position of Technical Director of the Association of Asia Pacific Airlines since June 2004.

In this role Mr Eran-Tasker leads and represents AAPA on key technical and operational industry issues in the areas of safety, security, environment and operations.

Prior to joining AAPA, Martin held a variety of managerial and engineering positions with the following organizations; International Air Transport Association (IATA), Airbus Industrie, and a number of airlines including British Airways, Saudi Arabian Airlines and British Caledonian Airways.

During his career Martin's responsibilities have included addressing areas in safety, security, certification, technical, operations, engineering, environment, fuel management, maintenance programme development and airline support functions. His experience also includes international relations, industry-to-government negotiations and the development of various aspects of regional and global aviation policy.

Mr Eran-Tasker holds a Bachelor of Science (Honors) degree is a Member of the Royal Aeronautical Society and a Chartered Engineer with the UK Engineering Council.