

Tim Colehan
Assistant Director, Member and External Relations
International Air Transport Association (IATA)

---

Tim is currently Assistant Director, Member and External Relations for IATA based in Geneva, Switzerland. He is responsible for policy analysis and development as well as working with airline members, regional airline associations and others to articulate and advocate the industry positions to governments and regulators. He leads IATA's work on dealing with the issue of unruly passengers, the promotion of international treaties and human trafficking.

Prior to joining Member and External Relations, Tim served as IATA Area Manager Thailand, Cambodia, Myanmar and Laos based in Bangkok and before this he was Country Manager Gulf Area (Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar and the UAE) responsible for all aspects of IATA's local operations and activities. Before joining IATA Tim was a General Manager with Servisair, one of the world's largest independent ground service providers, with responsibility for teams of up to 400 employees.

Tim holds a Master's Degree in Air Transport Management from Cranfield University, UK